Lord Foster is awarded 'Prize of the European Press'

On Friday 2 September, Lord Foster was awarded the Prize of the European Press at a ceremony in the Palais Sanssouci, Frederick the Great's elegant summer palace in Potsdam. The Prize is presented to a European who has left their mark and had a positive impact upon the lives of the peoples of Europe. It was awarded at the conclusion of the M100 - Sanssouci Colloquium, the first of a series of annual meetings that discuss the European media's role in promoting an understanding of contemporary politics, economics, arts and science, and leisure.
