Foster + Partners is opening doors for homeless people this Christmas

Instead of sending Christmas cards this year Foster + Partners has decided to make a donation to Crisis, the national homeless charity, by participating in the 2007 Christmas Card Challenge Campaign.

As part of the campaign Foster + Partners name will be included in two double page spread adverts in December editions of the Financial Times which will convey our Christmas greetings.

This year the campaign has a target to raise one million pounds. This money will help Crisis to work with homeless people across the UK year round, helping them to rebuild and transform their lives and reconnecting them with areas such as education and training, housing and employment.

Foster + Partners is pleased to donate to Crisis this Christmas to help homeless people throughout the UK leave homelessness behind them for good. www.crisis.org.uk/cc
