Groundbreaking for Foster + Partners super-high tower in Moscow

Today's groundbreaking of Foster + Partners Russia Tower the tallest building in Europe has been marked at a ceremony attended by Yuri Luzhkov, the mayor of Moscow, and members of the Moscow Government. Set to be a striking new addition to the dynamic high-rise skyline of Moscow City, its unique form will be a visible landmark from the heart of Moscow.

The building continues the practice's investigation into the nature of the tower, taking structural, functional, environmental and urban logic to a new dimension. The mixed-use project incorporates apartments, hotel, office and leisure space and will have an energy cycle that pioneers sustainable architecture and reinforces the economic and social vitality of Moscow City.
